五、閱讀測驗：

The Maori are the indigenous people in New Zealand, and their culture is rich in tradition and history. The elders still tell the histories and legends to the children of today. It is important for the children to learn these stories so that the Maori culture continues.

One of their favorite legends is about a child, Maui. Maui wanted to go fishing with his brothers, but he was not allowed, so he hid in their waka, or fishing boat. When he was found, he begged not to send him back. Since his brothers would not share their bait, he used his own blood and dropped his fishing line in the water. He caught a huge fish and pulled so hard on the line to bring the fish up that he placed one foot on the edge of the waka for more power. As he brought the fish in, he was hit to break the edge of the boat into the sea, creating the Kaikoura Peninsula, a town in the northeast of New Zealand's South Island.
